Providing support to Ontario's Family Health Teams

Kate is a founding partner with Dykeman Dewhirst O'Brien LLP providing health law, policy and administration consulting services.

Kate consults to hospitals, long term care homes, research institutes, family health teams, community health centres, and other health sector organizations on issues dealing with:

- privacy, confidentiality and health records;
- governance and by-laws;
- clinical policy;
- physician privileges (including disruptive physician management);
- risk management;
- regulation of health professionals;
- research and research ethics; and
- mental health and addictions.

Kate brings a practical in-house experience to her consulting practice as she was Corporate Counsel to the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health from 2003-2008.

Kate is faculty at Osgoode Law School, teaches in their Professional Development program on a variety of topics and teaches the LL.M. course on Mental Health Law. She is also Editor-in-Chief of Risk Management in Canadian Health Care, Butterworths (with her partner Mary Jane Dykeman).
